The Bloustein Local Government Research Center

New Jersey is served by more than 1,500 distinct local government agencies: municipalities, school districts, utilities, counties, and more. Yet, even with this wealth of opportunity, precious little substantive research has been done within the local government environment to inform some of our state's most pressing policy issues.

The Bloustein Local Government Research Center, or Bloustein Local <http://blousteinlocal.rutgers.edu/>, serves as a focal point and engages in a range of services, including:

- Encouraging and conducting applied and academic research on local government fiscal and administrative issues, emphasizing application and support to New Jersey local government.
- Developing resources that can assist others in conducting research and analysis.
- Organizing and hosting conferences and symposia on New Jersey local government fiscal and administrative issues.
- Supporting New Jersey local government fiscal and administrative policy development, implementation, and analysis through contract research and on-call advice for organizations and institutions that engage in local government policy setting and policymaking.
- Promoting and increasing public understanding of local government issues by partnering with and supporting civic and media organizations that inform and educate the public on local government matters.

A list of the Center's current projects may be found online at <http://blousteinlocal.rutgers.edu/projects/>.

About the Author

Raphael J. Caprio is University Professor at Rutgers University's Edward J. Bloustein School of Planning and Public Policy, with active research in the areas of local and state budgeting, public finance, financial management, and public-sector management. He is active in labor and public-sector interest arbitration, providing expert testimony in more than 100 arbitration cases; Dr. Caprio also maintains a continuing interest and participation in media and public policy, for which he has received multiple New York and mid-Atlantic Emmy nominations and awards.

Dr. Caprio also has extensive experience in higher education management, serving as department chair, associate academic dean, acting college dean, associate provost, interim University CIO, and research institute director. Most recently he served as University Vice President for Continuing Studies for more than 15 years, in which position he provided executive leadership for off-campus, distance learning, summer and winter session, and continuing education activities at the university.

He has served on several community service boards and is currently a member of the St. Benedict's Preparatory School Board of Trustees. Dr. Caprio can be reached at ray@dceo.rutgers.edu.

Executive Summary

Challenges currently associated with many of New Jersey’s public pension plans are necessarily stimulating discussion over potential solutions. A significant component of any possible solution would involve the Teachers Annuity Pension Fund (TPAF), with approximately 138,000 of the more than 400,000 active pension system members in 2014.<sup>1</sup>

The primary goal of this research is to provide a preliminary estimate on both a municipality and school board basis for the potential assumption of part or all current and/or previously unfunded or underfunded employer contributions to TPAF.

This analysis is policy neutral and takes no position on the veracity of one potential solution to the State’s pension fund challenge associated with the TPAF over another. It simply seeks an informed answer to the potential (and estimated) impact on a municipality by municipality basis of each one percent “employer” contribution that would need to be raised on the local level should local boards of education be asked to fund part, or all, of the employer contribution. This analysis also develops this calculation with no assumption of offsetting savings from other changes in public policy (e.g. savings from health benefit programs that might be dedicated to offsetting new pension contributions from local employers).

This particular analysis utilized the NJ Transparency website<sup>2</sup> to access more than 406,000 employee records for pensionable salaries that were reported for the immediate past four quarters, which at the time of access, represented total calendar 2014 salaries. Approximately 138,000 records for members of TPAF were extracted and analyzed by “employer”, typically representing a local school board. Outliers, such as TPAF members at Community Colleges, were ultimately removed from the analysis, which focuses primarily on local and regional school boards.

While summary data are provided for County-based units such as Vo-Techs or Educational Services Commissions (ESCs), no direct effort was made to allocate salary costs to municipalities for these units.

METHODOLOGY

- (1) The first step in the analyses was to determine the number and total salaries of TPAF member employees on a county by county basis, further refined by each educational employer in the county, whether entirely coincident with a municipality or part of a regional or consolidated district. Charter schools salary data, and consequently the base upon which an employer pension contribution would be made, are treated as independent employers in the database. Accordingly, Charter School salary costs are assigned to the “host” municipality within which the Charter School resides (as local tax-payers would be responsible for these “employers” as well). Assignments of school board (i.e. employer) salaries to one of the state 565 municipalities were determined on an employer by employer basis.
- (2) School boards in New Jersey range from comprehensive K-12 districts, serving a single municipality, to consolidated K-12 districts serving more than one municipality, to regional districts providing most typically high school services to multiple municipalities often (though not exclusively) with K-6 or K-8 local “districts”. For each regional or consolidated district, the equalized value for each member municipality in the district was utilized to approximate the proportional responsibility of salaries (and potential pension contributions) for each regional or consolidated district municipality. For each “regional” or “consolidated” district, the actual reported TPAF salary for 2014 was then distributed amongst member communities.

- (3) Not calculated at this point (and beyond the scope of this initial study) are liability estimates that are a function of tuition between sending and receiving units. We anticipate that the computed estimate of each 1% contribution toward employer pension contributions will be lower for many “sending districts” since these estimates do not assign pension fund liability to tuition that may be paid to another district. Two points are important here. First, it is reasonable to anticipate a fairly direct increase above the estimated costs we show for sending districts as the corresponding receiving districts will most likely pass through some or all of the increased costs associated with pension contributions in the form of higher tuition rates. Secondly, we note that it is possible to theoretically assign some portion of per student costs to salary, and develop a rough “back of the envelope” estimated increase for these sending districts. Doing so, however would undermine local receiving boards who are appropriately responsible for setting tuition. The mere projection of a “benchmark” tuition pass through would also violate our goal of policy neutrality. Finally, we also note that receiving districts would benefit from some level of cost allocation of pension cost increases reminding all that the data following are but informed estimates to assist with policy development.
- (4) TPAF salaries are determined and assigned to municipalities; one percent of the total was then calculated for all municipalities, with a small number of expected exceptions (e.g. Teterboro). In order to estimate the impact that each 1% of salary would have on residential property owners, two additional calculations were completed for each municipality. First, the percentage of total value in each municipality represented by Class 2

(i.e. residential property) was multiplied by the 1% thus determining how much of this 1% would necessarily be borne by residential property owners. Second, once the residential share of liability is determined, an average impact for each line item (property owner) is determined by dividing the residential share of liability by the number of residential line items in the municipality.

- (5) Since the potential employer “pension match” is still a policy hypothetical, without benefit of actuarial input nor the extent to which some deferred liability payment might be made, the 1% liability calculation is developed as a placeholder since it is fairly easy to estimate any variance from that point forward based upon various pro-posed policies. For example, a potential employer liability might be proposed at 12%; knowing the cost of each 1% of salary enables a fairly easy calculation of the average impact on residential property owners by simply multiplying the 1% calculation by 12. Accordingly, a 1% estimate which might be, as an example, $12.50, would be easily determined to be an estimated annual property tax increase of $150.00 in the event that educational employers are required to contribute 12% of salary toward the TPAF (i.e.  $12 \times $12.50$ ).

Two final points should be mentioned. First, this analysis assumes that a shift of teacher pension costs to local school districts would concurrently include an amendment to statute (P.L.2010, c.40) allowing for an adjustment to the state-imposed 2% tax levy cap in an appropriate manner. Second, this report analyzes the impact of local assumption of the school district employer’s share of teacher pension costs. It does not address other recent proposals, such as shifting the school district employer cost of teachers’ post-retirement medical benefits from the state to local school districts, nor possible savings from health benefit proposals that may or may not be available or dedicated to offset some of the estimated cost increases.

* Excludes county-based educational units, such as vocational school districts, educational services commissions, and special services school districts, as well as legacy employees at community colleges and elsewhere. Reported TPAF salaries paid within the database used, including supplemental income, totaled $9.780 billion.

** Using a different set of data, the February 2015 report of the New Jersey Pension and Health Benefit Study Commission, A Roadmap to Resolution, cites statewide TPAF pensionable pay-roll at $10.038 billion. Accordingly, estimates contained herein may be regarded as conservatively low, prudent and likely some 2.5% lower than estimates drawn from the "Roadmap" data-base.

Part 2

COUNTY BY COUNTY TRANSITION FROM DISTRICT DATA TO MUNICIPAL COST DATA

Determination of the Cost of Each 1% Contribution By Schools for Each Municipality

The following section has three components for each county

1. A listing of all educational employers with total TPAF Salaries in 2014
2. These data are followed by the allocation of salary costs from any regional district to participating municipal level units, yielding a total salary responsibility on a municipality basis
3. Finally, a 1% “cost out” and impact per residential line item is determined by acting 1% of the assigned salaries, determining the amount of that assignable to residences, and dividing the residential liability among the number of Class 2 properties in the municipality.<sup>3</sup>

Once a policy proposal is developed, whether it be 7%, 17%, 27%, or any other number, the average estimated cost per residential property can be determined by simple multiplication of the 1% estimate.

List of Sending and Receiving Districts

Currently, the New Jersey Administrative Code at N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-17.1 (<http://www.nj.gov/education/code/current/title6a/chapter23a.pdf>) provides the method for determining sending district tuition per pupil. While the regulations factor in “employee benefits,” the regulations currently exclude “Employee retirement and social security contributions for TPAF members which are fully funded by the state.”

However, the operative intent is based upon retirement and other payments “fully funded by the state.” It is reasonable, therefore, to anticipate that any proposed restructuring of the State’s pension systems that would involve school board local payments not now made, would necessarily also include the consideration of these pension and social security costs now being part of the tuition determination as these payment would no longer be “fully funded by the state.”

Accordingly, a comprehensive list of sending and receiving districts have been developed with the associated cost per pupil (2013-2014); these tuitions would potentially be subject to adjustment as a result of possible pension shifts.

We note that the calculated cost per 1% of salaries may be underestimated for the following list of 119 sending districts. This is primarily because we are unable at this time to determine pass-through costs from the receiving district. Similarly, as TPAF salaries for receiving districts are entirely within the receiving district, the cost per 1% may be overestimated for these districts as some portion of any increased cost for employer pension contribution will likely be passed through in the form of higher contractual rates.

Sending and receiving districts follow:

DATA APPENDICES

The data set from which this analysis was drawn also included a small number of demographic variables including year of birth of each active TPAF member. These data thus enabled a brief, preliminary overview of age cohorts. Further, once school board data were assigned to municipalities, additional information such as the equalized calendar year property tax rate in the municipality became available for empirical analyses. The charts that follow are suggestive in a variety of ways in which this question might be further examined to contribute to positive policy recommendations yielding the fewest unintended negative consequences.

The charts include:

- Percent of TPAF Members Under 30 years of Age by County
- Percent of TPAF Members over 55 Years of Age by County
- Age Distribution of TPAF Active Members by County of School Board Employer
- Average Salary by County and Age Cohort, and
- Corrections of the “Cost per line item” with several variables including Income, Average Residential Value, and Total Average Property taxes.
